

Living Room Conversations

Pilot Project - North Boulder Community

Our intention is to start in a neighborhood where there exists some sense of community and grow the practice from there. It is our recommendation that we begin by recruiting participants from the North Boulder area for the following reasons:

- A community that shares schools, parks, grocery stores, etc. means that there are a great many common goals and interests. Also the prospect of ongoing relationship and chance encounters with community members is more likely. These factors support relationship-building, a cornerstone of the Living Room Conversation practice.
- In prior listening sessions, North Boulder residents expressed an interest in a dialogue process that is in keeping with the Living Room Conversation practice.
- The North Boulder community has already demonstrated a sense of momentum and cohesiveness in the organization of the “North Boulder Celebrates” event. This event could serve as an ideal opportunity to let community members know about Living Room Conversations and upcoming co-host training opportunity.
- This is a pilot project, which means there is much to be explored and learned as this process unfolds. As we learn, we can apply best practices to continued efforts to share Living Room Conversations with other City of Boulder neighborhoods and residents.
